ICE CREAM, SODA WATER, &c. ICE CREAM.

My Ice Cream Manufactory, one of the largest in Virginia, still continues to supply private customers, Sunday schools, excursions, pienics, fairs, festivals and associations, as well as the trade, with that SUPERIOR CREAM that has made a name in this community, and is known everywhere as BRENGLE'S ICE CREAM. I could easily reduce its price by lowering its quality, but good cream, of fresh, pure, wholesome ingredients, cannot be furnished at a less price than I serve it. Of course, I could "grade my cream by the price," but my cream would loss the good name that years of fair dealing have won for it. I ask that persons abroad ordering "Brengle's Cream" from third parties will assure themselves that the cream sent is certainly from my establishment. I warrant my cream, and do not wish that inferior cream, sent out as mine, may injure its reputation. It is my aim to furnish the BEST ORKAM IN AMERICA, and my customers are satisfied that I do so. The Capuibal Island.

An American named Lewis Chase arrived at San Francisco a few days since from the Marquesas Islands, where he resided for twenty five years. He has been talking to the San Francisco reporters, and the stories that he tells of cannibalism are sufficiently revolting. He says: This horrible practice is indulged in principally to gratify a deadly spirit of revenue which one tribe of natives holds against another. In the many brutal and bloody civil wars which they wage against one another the slain and captured victims are caten with a vengeance. In their religious rites, also, they offer up human sacrifices captured in battle. When a victim is selected for a cannibal feast his body is washed clean, and the hair of his head is burned off. If the feast is not of a religious character, the victim is simply beaten to death with war clubs, and when dead his body is again washed and placed in a large oven dug into the earth. The hole formicg the oven has a fire beneath, and over this is a pile of round stones. Oa the top of the stones mats made of strong material are placed, in which the body is wrapped up. These mats are then covered over with a great pile of leaves, and all is again covered with another layer of mats. The five beneath absorbs enough of air to keep it burning steadily. and soon a volume of steam is generated. This escapes slowly through the mats and leaves, and gradually the body becomes cooked through this simple but certain steaming process. The cooks are of superiorskill in their prof ssion, and can tell to the instant when the is sufficiently done to suit the tastes of the guests. When ready to take it out of the oven, all the material covering it is carefully removed, and when it comes to the last layers surrounding the victim the mats are taken off with a sensitive touch, lest any of the skie on the body should be tern away. When all is bare, and the body looks brown and beautifully cooked, a shout of demoniac laughter rends the air, and the cooks are complimented in the ing to enjoy the dreadful luxury. The brain and eyes are considered the greatest delicacies, and are always given to the chiefs. The breasts thighs and the outer portion of the calves of the legs are the next greatest luxuries, and in this category also may be placed slices cut off from other portions of the body. All the parts mentioned belong to the chiefs and chiefesses, of high and low rank, according to their relative social status, while the rest of the body and the ectrails are savagely devoured by the common natives. The flesh is eaten from the hand, and to give it greater relish is dipped in native sauces. Cocoanuts, yams and various kinds of nuts are also among the edibles, be sides certain varieties of fish; but the piece do resistance is the human portion of the While the feast lasts the groatest hilarity provails, and after it is over a fearful drunken orgie follows, whenever the liquors, native or imported, can be procured. Scenes of the wildest licentiousness accompany the revel, and for days a!ter the cannibais are in a state of semi-uncontive, and after a fearful debauch they will lie as if dead for a space of from ten to fifteen hours. Great pomp and solemnity surround victims intended for religious sacrifices, and none but high priesis can officiate in the most solemn ceremonies. The priests have numerous attendants, mostly young boys who are being educated for priestly honors. The victim selected is usually a man of note among his tribe, and while he is in the hands of his religious torturers, previous to the act of sacrifice, receives some consideration. When the hour arrives he is placed upon a large stone, to which his body is cound firmly. The priest then chant low is cound firmly. The priest then chant low wails, which increase in volume until it seems as if they were shricking. Charms, spells and incantations are then brought into play, the priests occasionally placing their hands upon the intended sacrifice, who never utters a word from the time he is selected as a sacrifice to the moment of his death. The instant selected for performing the operation being reached, the chief high priest advances towards the victim and high priest advances towards the victim, and, feeling for the beating of the heart, announces to his attendants that he is ready to commence. He then takes a knife and deliberately cuts out He then takes a knife and deliberately cuts out the heart, the victim writhing in agony during the process. To speak or utter a word during this frightful process would be cowardice, an evidence that the sacrifice had acknowledged the power of his enemies. The heart cut out, it is handed to a young priest, who hears it off to the highest chief. The versat considerior this the the highest chief, the priest considering this the greatest honor of his life. The victim quickly expires, and then the whole body is cut up and divided among those waiting to receive their portion of it. The firsh of a religious victim is more highly provid than that of any other, all the portions considered most choice being reserved for the high priests and high chiefs.

The cannibals have epicurean tastes and a fine sense of the various shades of delicacy of different classes of victims. The firsh most highly prized is that of the African, and a colored man who in life, neither drank liquor nor smoked, if he falls into the hands of the Marqueses cannibals, is certain to have the highest respect shown him. He will be fed luxuriously and tended carefully up to the time that he has to be sacrificed. The bodies of missionaries take second rank, because in lief they are supposed to have used neither liquors nor tobacco. Sailors We have in store and for sale a large stock of are not esteemed a luxury, because their flesh is salt water. The cannibals have the most dainty sense of smell in this respect, and will tell instantly whether their victim has ever been in the habit of using liquors or stimulants of any kind. Young children and women, especially unmarried women, are great luxuries. Persons advaned in years are seidom eaten, as their bodies are too full of well developed and tough sinews. Mr. Chase has never seen a white person offered up as a sacrifice to the cannibal appetite, but there are well authenticated cases of such being the fact. A missionary and two colored men are known to have been eaten on Dominique Island, one of the most savage of the group. In recent times the cannibals rarely eacrifice a white victim, but they are entirely willing to do so if the opportunity offers.
